RECRUITING FOR THE BRITISH ARMY REPORTED AS BRISK

LONDON.—Recruiting during August was steady and apparently satisfactory. Toward the end of the month, however, a boom in recruiting set in, particularly in London, and it was quickly evident that Lord Kitchener's second new army of 100,000 men would be raised in the early days of September.

In London on August 31, 4600 recruits joined the ranks, a record total up to that date, and during the days immediately following this standard was maintained. In the previous week the average enrolment per day was 1700.

At the same time the appeal by Viscount Escher for a further 30,000 men to form reserve battalions for the County of London Territorial force was quickly responded to, many of the battalions being full, or practically full by the beginning of September. Among them was the fourteenth battalion, London Scottish, the fifteenth County of London battalion and the sixteenth battalion, Queen's Westminster; which had their full complement and the ninth, thirteenth, twenty-fifth and twenty-eighth, which were practically full.

The Honorable Artillery Company quickly reached full establishment in regard to the second battalion and recruiting for it ceased on Sept. 2. Throughout the country also, recruiting became much brisker, rising from the good average of 16,000 per day to about 20,000 per day in the last few days of September.

It was morning in Grassville. An old citizen and a young one met and this conversation took place: "How are you making out at the opera house?" "We turned 'em away last night." "G'wan." "Fact. Sixteen of 'em. Manager said it was no use burning gas for a $9 house."
